What you need to know

If you have an ORCA card
Keep using it. Starting in summer 2022, if you want to reload your card at a retail store, you will need a new, redesigned card.

If you need an ORCA card
Purchase cards online, by phone, at vending machines, retail stores or customer service locations.

Starting in spring 2022, myORCA.com and the myORCA app will replace orcacard.com and orcaard.biz.

Paying for your trip
Beginning in spring 2022, each customer will need their own card to pay their fare. Cash will continue to be accepted at vending machines, retail stores, customer service locations and on buses.

At this time riders may only use one form of payment per trip—ORCA card or cash. When transferring with your ORCA card, use E-purse value to cover additional fares.

Managing your account
Beginning in spring 2022, to manage your card online, you can create a new account and link your card at myORCA.com or the mobile app. You’ll be able to manage multiple cards, transfer balances and set up autoloads.

Reduced fare programs
Reduced fare programs will continue to be available to qualified low-income riders, seniors (65+ years), youth (6 –18 years), and persons with disabilities.

ORCA at retail stores
Retail stores will still sell ORCA cards, but starting in spring 2022, they will only load E-purse value and no longer sell passes.

You can convert E-purse value to passes at myORCA.com, with the myORCA app, at a vending machine, or by calling or visiting customer service.

Between May and July 2022, you will experience a one-hour delay loading E-purse value to your card at retail stores. You can load E-purse value or passes instantly at myORCA.com, with the myORCA app, at a vending machine, or by calling or visiting customer service.

In July 2022, the ORCA retail network will expand to twice the number of locations and begin selling an updated card. You’ll need the new card to add value at stores after that.
